Class Poem

In the fall of forty-six
Sixteen freshies were in a fix
Here they were, the first day of school
And everyone felt like a fool.

The mighty seniors seemed so great
And at initiation they really put us straight
Now we have become the Senior Class
With four lads and eight little lass.

Marian, who is one of our very tall lass
Always stands at the head of the class,
Her grades just can't seem to be beat
But at a dance, she's really light on her feet.

Then there's Gene with eyes of brown
When there's girls around he goes to town,
He's got a smile for everyone
And always seems to have a lot of fun.

Gladys is a girl who's very sweet
With a smile that's hard to beat;
She loves to drive a car with an over-drive
Slow down girl while you're still alive.

Although Don is not a very big boy
When Susann's around he's full of joy,
He seems to like to repair old cars
But they always stop, when he's out under the stars.

Don has a sister who's name is Betty Lou
She has blond hair and her eyes are of blue
Homemaking seems to be right in her line,
And when Francis is away, for him she does pine.

Gloria is always full of pep and vim
She really shines when the lights are dim
She travels near, she travels far
For with "U-neta" she is a star.

A teacher we find next on our way
And her name is Alta Mae.
She likes to read, she likes to talk
But best of all, she likes to walk.

Now on our list is one of our lads
Who's never too gay or ever very sad,
'How about a ride?' to Jim we say,
And then here he comes in his Model "A".

We have a pair of twins in our class
And Retha is the name of one of the lass
She is one of the studious type,
And from her, never a gripe.

Rodney's the name of our last boy
Building airplanes gives him great joy,
Mechanics, electricity, and art
Are the things with which he'll never part.

Now on our list we come to Ruth
 Who is one of our original youth
 She's full of fun and likes to dance
 And always willing to take a chance.

Claryce Ann, the smallest in the class,
 Is also Bill's favorite lass
 She is a very musical gal
 And also is everyone's fine pal.

The time has now come to say Adieu
 And so we want to say to you
 "Thanks to each and every one
 For all the wonderful things you've done."

Not Finished—Just Begun,
 Is the motto on which our class is run.
 Together today, happy and gay,
 We hope to meet again some day.

Class Prophecy

VAGUE BUT TRUE

Eighty-seven years ago when we were such happy mortals living our daily lives. Now we have lost all our earthly worries, but we will always remember the incidents of the past. For instance there was Jim Cerny, the friendly undertaker, who got all of his classmates' business. They left their last words with him.

Rodney Helget, the electrical engineer, died by his own invention, an electrical handshaker which got him by the neck and his last words were "Hangman's Boogie". We had a busy farmer, Gene Plouzek, who died of lack of work during a dry year. He was singing "Cool Water" when Jim arrived too late. Then we had a very busy office girl. It seems she, Marian Andelt, died when she fell to the floor. For you see she had just fallen from the boss's lap. Her last words were "Oh, Dear! What Can The Matter Be."

It really was too bad that Retha McReynolds, the nurse, couldn't have been around those days because if she had been we probably wouldn't have died so soon. Retha was trying to keep her mind on her work, when the scalpel slipped. She was humming "A Tisket a Tasket a Brown and Yellow Casket."

It seems time had lingered on and Jim was thinking that his business was very dead when one day Alta Axline, the school teacher, was brought in. It seems she was telling her pupils the poem "School Days" when suddenly she fell to the floor, never again to teach for the strain had been too much for her. Don Johnson, the great cowboy, died with his boots on. For he was riding a horse humming "Ghost Riders in the Sky" when he forgot to duck for a tree limb. He is still probably riding his horse strumming his harp instead of his guitar.

It seems that Gloria Luzum saw all of her class-mates because she provided the music for the funerals. Gloria gained her experience by playing in a band. She pounded the ivories of the organ; over exerted, she died playing "Open Up Those Pearly Gates". Betty Johnson had a very natural death. She was sitting in a rocking chair singing "Old Folks At Home" to her husband.

We remember Gladys Vavra told us that she liked to drive fast. Later she joined Jimmy Linche's Death Dodgers. You would never guess what happened on one of her days off. She was riding a bicycle down a hill too fast, without using the handlebars when a tree suddenly appeared before her. She was singing "Daisy Belle", (A Bicycle Built For Two).

Ruth McReynolds was as you remember, always working on her bookkeeping. Well, we guess she never recovered from her attempt to complete it. She passed on singing "Maybe It's Because". We had a small class, but it seems the smallest was the last to die. Claryce Roberts lived to the age of ninety-eight. She was an entertainer at Bill's Nightclub. She passed on while playing the "Darktown Strutter's Ball".

In the fall of 1948 the juniors presented their production, "Saved By The Belle," sponsored by Mrs. Hiatt. The plot was centered on a college sorority. During the course of the evening the "Belle" became involved with a pugilist and a newspaper reporter. Bill Moser, a sophomore, helped to complete the cast.

In January 1950 the senior class, under the direction of Mr. Reid, presented a three-act comedy, "Call Me Darling." The plot centered on the homecoming of a lad who had run away to "sail the seven seas" and had the harrowing experience of being shipwrecked.

The seniors lived through their 8:00 A. M. practices and although Mr. Reid thought they never would learn the play, it was a success.
